New Office as Head of the Executive Council of Church Will Not Interfere With His Work in Tennessee.

Bishop Gailor, although much of his me will be given to his duties as pres-tent of the executive council of the piscopal Church in America, to which dent of the executive council of the Episcopai Church in America, to which he was elected at the triennial convention of the church at Detroit, will still retain his residence in Memphis and will of course continue his work as the ecclemistical head of the church in the diocess of Tennessen.

Bishop Gallor reached home Saturday and was present at the morning service Sunday at St. Mary's cathedral, instead of a sermon, the bishop outlined a few of the more important acts of the general convention.

"Ferhaps one of the most far-reaching actions taken was the creation of the executive council," said the bishop. "It will have I4 members, one appointed from eacts of the eight provinces into which the church has been divided, and 16 others, half of them laymen, from the church at large. This council will co-ordinate the work of the many great boards and committees, which, heretofore, have each worked independently, reporting only once every tiree years to be general convention. Reports will be made frequently, and the council will meet at any time at the reall of the president never less than four times a year, and probably much oftener than that.

Closer Church Co-operation.

Closer Church Co-operation.

"The movement toward church unity also was apparent. The convention considered the request from a committee of the great Congregational church, which may eventually lead to some form of closer co-operation between the two churches."

of closer co-operation between the two churches. "Committees will work between now and the next convention, upon plans for a greater spirit of co-operation with the members of every Christian religion throughout the world.

"But the greatest movement within our church itself is the coming general survey, which has been decided upon as the result of the conviction that there must be a closer union, a closer fellowship among the $5.00,000 communicants of the church, if its great influence is to be fully developed net only as a religious but as a great moral force.

"We must realize that our duties do not stop with our own parish, our own community, or our own diocese, but that every community must be awakened and the life of the church must be reviviled and broadened."

The nation-wide survey of the Episcopal church, to which the bishop referred, will take place during November. Committees are being organized in every parish to carry out the work, and when the conditions in every parish have been ascertained, the reports made will be sent to headquarters of the survey in New York, where they will be facts thus ascertained, a program for the entire work of the church will be laid out.

More Than Million May Be Jobless In Spain On Nov. 4 MADRID, Oct. 27. (By Associated Press.)—More than a million persons throughout Spain will be thrown out of employment Tuesday, Nov. 4, if the decision of the congress of Spanish employers at Barcelona, deciaring for a lockout, is carried out. In Barcelona slone 209,000 men and women will be affected by the decision.

Governmental authorities are concerned over the situation and are expected to exert every influence to induce the manufacturers to reconsider their action. It is declared if the general lockout is put into effect every factory in Spain of any importance will be closed. Members of the employers congress say the decision was taken as a protest against industrial unrest in Spain. It seems probable labor elements throughout the country will take same action to meet the situation. Syndicalists of the province of Catalonia have called a conference at Barcelons for Saturday of this week to take action on any decisions of the employers congress. This call, however, was issued Oct. 21, some days before announcement was made of the decision to call for a lockout in all parts of the country.

for Man's Nerves Which Were Already Strained to By BOB HILDEBRAND.

The ticking of the mantelpiece clock was steady—tick, tock—rythmic—tick, tock—even if the footsteps of the clock's owner were not, as he wended his tortuous way into his room Saturday night an hour before midnight.

It had been an occasion with "the boys"—when the last three bottles in the last case had been opened to celebrate a birthday. He had good reason to be home so early—the last drop in the last bottle in the last case had been drained full 30 minutes before.

As he stumbled into his room, treading as he thought softly, friend wife, from the adjoining room chuckled at the headache she knew would be his in the morning. A headache, thought she, which would prove a better lesson than any adverse criticism she might pile on his throbbing cranium.

With the abandon of near midnight and all's fuit, he tossed clothes hither, thither and yon. Then he tumbled into bed, a—well, a prohibitionist might have termed him a sodden slumberer. But he slept the sleep of the just—enough!

Stlence settled over the room, broken only by his heavy breathing. And the "Durn," he murmured. "One o'clock."

And he dropped back to sleep.
"Ting." again chimed the musical bell, after a 39-minute interval.
Again the sleeper stirred and half awakened. Doubt crept into his mind.
"I must have dreamed that cockeyed clock struck one before," the siumberer murmured, and again was fast asleep. Again a 30-minute interval, and—"Ting."

The man sat up sharply, wide awake, "Ding bust my time, either I'm crazy, or that clock is," he said aloud, addressing the blank darkness of his room. "That's the third time that clock has struck one, or I'm a helfer."

After a brief interval he gave up the puzale as too deep for his fuddled brain, and dropped off to sleep. As he did so, his door opened softly and his wife stepped in.

She fumbled in the darkness, across to the clock, and set back the time an hour, as per instructions from congress, and the finis of daylight saving for 1919. Then she stole softly out. "Ting."

and authority of congress was not asked.

There may be much debate about the sending of American troops to Siberia after an armistice with Germany had been signed, or the landing of American marines on the Adriatic coast, because, technically, the United States is still in a state of war, but there is no doubt that inside congress a determined feeling to control at all times the use of military and naval forces has found expression here and there in the dozen reservations tacked on to the peace freaty as a condition of the senate's ratification.

But while aiming at specific cases in which they think the executive power has not been properly used, congress has gone to the other extreme in restricting the action of the executive. Absolutely nothing can be done, for example, under the language of one of the reservations to help preserve the territorial integrity of any country in Central or South America—all of which countries will be members of the league—without the consent of congress, eventhough, to be sure, the Mouroe doctrine is a traditional policy of the United States. So that while insisting that no foreign nation should interpret the Monroe doctrine, congress insists that no American president shall be permitted hereafter to apply the doctrine without consent of congress.

This will prove troublesome to many Republicans who have always argued that the western hemisphere was the exclusive domain of the United States and that an American president could send our fleet and its marines anywhere in the North and South Atlantic without waiting for action by congress. Now it will be possible for obstruction just as soon as the Republicans get a president in the White Heuse—to hamstring a Republican executive and require a vote of congress before any authorization is granted to use the army or navy anywhere in any dispute with a member state of the league of nations.

None of thesse things were probably intended by the Republicane, but in their suxiety to show their disapproval of the use which Mr. Wilson made

Similarly an interesting situation has arisen with respect to the Monroe doctrine itself. Under the terms of one reservation it is stated emphatically that the United States "will not submit to arbitration or inquiry by the assembly or council of the league of nations any question which in the judgment of the United States depends upon or relates to its long-established policy commonly known as the Monroe doctrine."

Now it so happens that the United States has aiready signed treaties with 30 of the principal nations of the globe, with the exception of only Germany and Japan, requiring the United States-to submit to a year's inquiry all questions in dispute that may arise between this country and any of the 30. According to the provisions of the covenant, previous treaties become invalid only if they are inconsistent with the language of the treaty itself. A nice question for international lawyers to decide now is whether the senate proposes to abrogate the 30 treaties insofar as they might apply to the Monroe doctrine or whether the senate means that the United States will submit a dispute about the Monroe doctrine to investigation and liquiry when an individual nation is concerned and will deny the same privilege to the collective body of nations.

For instance, the senators say they do not want to give Great Britain the privilege of interpreting the Monroe doctrine in the event of a dispute between the United States and Great Britain. But under the famous Bryan treaties of investigation, Great Britain is given the right to discuss with the United States and yeasiton whatsoever through a joint commission established for that purpose.

While many people in the United States may regard the Hryan treaties as a sort of a joke on the senate, the British foreign office regards them as the solemn obligation of the United States, and would be sure to invoke the treaties if any question whatsoever through a joint commission established for that purpose. While many people in the United States, and would represent the s

Use less butter — more BRER RABBIT Syrup

7ITH the price of butter constantly soaring, it's a good plan to let the children spread BRER RABBIT on their bread.

They enjoy it immensely and nothing can be more wholesome. BRER RABBIT is the pure country made Ribbon-Cane Syrup.

The happy combination about BRER-RABBIT is that it's a wonderful food for health, strength and energy, with a delicious wholesome "flavor" without an equal. -And considering its food value it remains as one of the most economical foods you can serve the family.

BRER RABBIT gives a delightful zest to the most commonplace meal. It is the ideal spread for all hot cakes and hot breads.

Keep BRER RABBIT constantly on the table, and you'll notice a gratifying drop in your butter bills.

these advantages are available, either to the executive or the legislative branches. There is no recall upon congress or on the executive. So the question really is whether it is better to trust to the wisdom of a man elected every four years who is responsible to public opinion and can decide things without hesitation or delay, or to congress, which by experience has rarely shown a leadership of its own in forcign policies or questions. Possibly some compromise may yet be worked out requiring that while the president may be vested with wide powers, he shall not exercise them without having fully advised with the senate and house foreign relations or foreign affairs committees of every detail in the negotiations or disputes with foreign powers. ## You Should Never "Rile" Your Liver

Thos. H. Allen

Don't prod a weak liver with harsh, harmful calomel. Mild, easy NR Tablets are better for biliousness.

NR Tonight - Tomorrow Feel Right

Prodding an inactive liver with calemel and sluggish bowels with powerful purgatives is like lashing a tired horse to exhaustion. It can be done once too often and sooner or later, if persisted in, may so weaken the organs as to cause serious results. Billous attacks, constipation, sick headaches, etc., are in the great majority of cases due to digestive trouble and no reasonable person can expect to obtain real or lasting benefit until the cause is corrected.

That many people realize this and are giving up the unwise purges, is proved by the fact that more than five millon boxes of Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) were used last year. Have you ever tried it?
